There's something different about Faith Countryman. It's not just her beauty, quick wit, or quirky sense of humor either. It's that she's divinely inspired.

Born under a crashing rainstorm on a ranch in central California, Faith discovers her gift of healing as a young girl. But poor judgment causes her to run away with her boyfriend to Los Angeles. It seems like the biggest mistake of her life until a surprising turn of events leads her to a place she's never heard of—a Victorian house in Cross Creek.

When Faith arrives, she steps into her destiny, sharing her gift with love and a confident spirit. As she meets the town's colorful characters—a handsome, heartbroken rancher among them—it's clear she's been brought here for a reason: to heal this community and to help them believe. The summer heats up. Testimonies are given. Change is underway, and plans begin for an old-fashioned tent revival.

Then a warm summer rain falls, bringing temptation and Faith's deepest fears. Will she be able to trust in God's love once again and heal the people of Cross Creek—and herself?
