The Freedom to Make Mistakes: A Portion from Packing Light Allison Vesterfelt

Allison Vesterfelt and her friend were just a few weeks into a 50-state road trip when their car broke down in Wyoming. Unsure of what to do, the two girls found themselves stranded in a small town and dependent on the help of strangers.

Through the questions and uncertainty, they contemplated what it means to live life without regret and when it's worth it to live with less baggage.

Read this small section of their road trip story, or find the whole story in Packing Light: Thoughts on Living Life with Less Baggage.

Moody Collective Portions are short pieces of content taken from our full-length books. Our goal is to introduce our readers to a complete idea in a brief, concise, and inexpensive format. Most portions will take about 20 minutes to read.
