I didn't have gold shoes, and I didn't have time to go shopping, but I thought I could just spray-paint some heels I owned that I never really wore. I spray-painted them and tried them out for three hours at church where they held up perfectly. I felt pretty good about myself. "Suckers who buy gold shoes when they could just spray-paint them," I thought, congratulating myself for my frugality and my foresight for testing them out.

As moms, we improvise. We get along. We make things work. And we make a lot of things up as we go along because, let's face it, no manual is ever going to cover all the bases a real mom needs to touch. But if laughter and perspective and a renewed energy to face the day are what you're after—if you too are a "real mom"—this is the book for you!
